Biographical Sketch

Dr. Stephen P. Magee is the James L. Bayless/Enstar Corporation Professor of Finance and Economics and former chairman of the Department of Finance. He earned his PhD in economics from MIT and has taught at the University of California, Berkeley, and the University of Chicago, most recently as a Visiting Professor in 1990, 1991 and 1997. He has been an Associate Editor for 5 academic journals, the National Science Foundation Committee for Economics and the Secretary of Commerce's Economic Advisory Board.

Magee has worked on the White House staff in Washington and has published over 70 academic articles and three books. His 1989 Black Hole Tariffs book was endorsed by two Nobel laureates in economics (James Buchanan and George Stigler) and the Chairman of the Nobel Committee for Economics, Assar Lindbeck. He has won three major awards in the Graduate School of Business at the Univ. of Texas: in both 1980 and 2000, he was selected the best professor teaching in the first year of the MBA Program and in 1990, he won the award for the top researcher on the faculty based on his research career.

In 2003, he presented an academic paper before Fidel Castro and over 1000 international economists at a conference in Havana, Cuba and then met with Castro for over an hour. He is a four-time player and co-captain of U.S. National Soccer Championship teams: 1999, 2000 and 2001 (men over age 50) and 2005 (men over age 60).

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan quoted Houthakker-Magee's research explaining the decline in the US trade balance over the last 35 years (Business Week, 2-28-2005, p. 29) and in 2004, New York Times columnist Paul Krugman said that this "Houthakker-Magee trade-balance effect is one of the most important empirical regularities in all of economics."

Magee was born in Wichita, Kansas, on March 17, 1943, and moved to Lubbock, Texas, in 1945. He is a graduate of Lubbock High School, Texas Tech (B.A., 1965; M.A., 1966) and M.I.T. (Ph.D. in Economics, 1969). He is married to Frances Toepperwein Magee and they have four boys: Chris, Ted, Bill and Chet. From 1969-1971, he was an Assistant Professor of Business Administration at the University of California at Berkeley; from 1971-76, he was an Associate Professor of International Business at the University of Chicago; from 1976 to the present, he has been a Professor at the University of Texas at Austin, where he teaches managerial micro-economics and international finance, during which time he was Visiting Professor at the University of Chicago (1990, 1991, 1997).

In December 1991, he presented his academic work on the positive and negative economic effects of lawyers to the Bush and Quayle staff at the White House. On September 24, 1992, his research "How Many Lawyers Ruin an Economy?" and the "Magee curve" appeared on the op-ed page of the Wall Street Journal.

Magee has served as an Associate Editor for the Review of International Economics, Journal of Economic Integration, Journal of International Economics, the Review of Economics and Statistics and Economics and Politics; he has served as a member of the Brookings Panel on Economic Activity.

Magee's current research interests include endogenous protection and rent seeking (the economic and political determinants of tariffs and other trade barriers), the economics of intellectual property and industrial organization, the positive and negative effects of lawyers and legal systems on national economies, bioeconomics and international finance. He has three books: International Trade and Distortions in Factor Markets (Marcel Dekker, 1976); International Trade (Addison-Wesley, 1980); and Black Hole Tariffs and Endogenous Policy Theory (Cambridge University Press, 1989, with William A. Brock and Leslie Young). The Black Hole Tariffs book was endorsed on the cover by two Nobel laureates in economics and the then Chairman of the Nobel Committee for Economics (Assar Lindbeck).
