Virtual Leadership: Leading Dispersed Teams

At a time of corporate belt tightening, people are traveling less and meeting less frequently with their fellow team members and leaders. Virtual teams are already a fact of the global marketplace as companies leverage talent diffused across the world and technology allows better communication. This trend is increasing rapidly as travel restrictions lessen face-to-face interaction. In this program, we examine what it takes to successfully work with, and lead, distanced teams. The session, drawn from recent research, identifies the necessary skills members of a virtual team need for creating successful teams. The session introduces a two-stage model of distance leadership and teaches participants how to more effectively work with, and lead, teams that work far apart.

Topics

- Why virtual leadership is critical in today's tough global business environment
- Basic principles for leading a distance team
- Essential teamwork skills required on a distance team
- Optimal strategies for communicating effectively on distanced team
- Motivating people from afar
- Building and maintaining trust in virtual
- Working cross culturally: The challenges and opportunities that different cultural backgrounds bring to virtual teams
